RetroVision Media Reviews and Recommends Count To Ten

Michael Blevins and Justin Boccitto have young stars shining brightly in the new Off-Broadway musical Count to Ten. In a triumphantly told lyrical tale, a down but hardly out for the count singer, writer, dancer and companion starved talent, struggles to capture the essence of love to complete his musical.

Victor Chase played by Boccitto finds himself forced to accept an invitation to work below his perceived value, at a summer camp for aspiring Broadway performers. Reluctantly, he uses the opportunity to cast his incomplete work of theatrical art with the only resources he has at his disposal; a bunch of star-struck adolescent campers with their own set of issues.

Blossoming love is in the air, replete with pimples, hormones and mononucleosis as the beleaguered artist deals with his own shortcomings while coming to the emotional rescue of his stage wannabes. As luck and love generally works out, our protagonist finds the missing spark in his life tiptoeing within kissing distance in pair of ballet shoes. The owner of the off the beaten path summer theater camp, Claire Vaughn (Jennifer Avila) for the spoiled, rich and in some cases neglected stars of tomorrow, offers Victor the shot in the heart he needs to find himself, as well as his love song.

Mr. Blevins, proving himself to be a master of many trades i.e. writing, directing, choreography and musician, produced a masterful gem of delightful entertainment that will offer inspiration to those seeking to ply their talents in the very competitive world of stage production. In honor of the Mr. Blevins, Mr. Boccitto Ms. Avila with standout tap artist Brian Merker and a fabulous cast, we offer Royal Wedding starring Fred Astaire and Jane Powell

In our opinion before you make a move towards this weekend's evening out we highly recommend you
